- At the end of regulation time, the team with the most goals wins the game.
- A 5 year ($18MM AAV contract offered to the 21-year-old Swedish center will make him the NHL's highest-paid player), beating out Kirill Kaprizov's $17MM AAV signed not long ago with the Wild.
- Instead, periods of five-on-five play lasting 20 minutes each will continue until one of the teams scores.
- Just ask the Calgary Flames and Nashville Predators, who both won the previous summer only to fall apart during the regular season.

As a young professional at just 25 years old, he should not be expected to play center for a Blues team that recently added Mason McTavish. Following that performance â€” McMichael was offered a two-year extension by Washington, which was a prove-it contract allowing the young center to increase his earnings once he established his game. After being chosen 25th overall in 2019, McMichael made his
